Professional services group Deloitte will today announce a joint corporate finance venture between its UK and Middle East firms and send six partners from the firm to Dubai to launch the venture.

The joint venture company, Deloitte Corporate Finance Limited, will be registered and authorised by the Dubai Financial Services Authority, and will initially focus on offering M&A advisory and support services, valuation, business modelling, IPO advisory, forensic & dispute services and, importantly, Islamic finance advice.

John Connolly, Deloitte Global Chairman said: "The Middle East is a very important region, with strong sustained economic growth and immense investment firepower. By joining forces with the Middle East firms, we will have the scale and breadth of financial skills to provide a full range of M&A services to clients from within and from outside the region."
